

Jennifer Hendee is from North Carolina and earned her undergraduate degree at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. Jennifer then obtained a Juris Doctorate Degree from Georgia State University College of Law in 2006. Jennifer enrolled in the law school's part time program and worked full time as a staff accountant at Ricoh for the duration of law school. By attending summer school each year and completing extra coursework, she graduated law school within three years. While in law school, Jennifer received the Georgia State College of Law Public Service Award in 2004 and 2005.

Jennifer began prosecuting in the Hall County Solicitor General's Office before graduating law school and tried multiple cases under the Georgia Law School Graduate Practice Act before passing the BAR exam in 2006. She spent five years as an Assistant Solicitor in Hall County State Court and was the Assistant Solicitor responsible for supervising Chief State Court Judge Charles Wynne's courtroom for years. Jennifer joined the Gwinnett County District Attorney's Office in 2011 and was promoted to Senior Assistant District Attorney in 2015.

Jennifer has tried more than 170 cases and litigated numerous appeals. In 2016, she prosecuted the first human trafficking case ever tried in Gwinnett County and secured a conviction without the testimony of the victim who the defendant forced to engage in prostitution.

Jennifer also assists with training local police agencies, including within municipalities and at the Gwinnett County Police Department, where she educates both recruits and sworn officers.
